APPENDIX III – CHECKLIST

The following checklist is indicative of the information required to be supplied to GPEAN during the two-stage submission process. GPEAN may also seek additional information, not listed here, in discussion with the bidding institution(s) as part of the second stage of the selection process, to ensure sufficient information to allow due diligence and effective planning for the Congress.

1. Organisational and External Support / Capacity

- Evidence of support from institution('s/s') chief academic officer(s).
- Evidence of external public and private sector support, including national and regional planning school associations.
- Evidence of potential sponsorship support.
- Record of comparable conference organisation and financial viability.

2. Proposed Structure of Congress

- Suggested theme and logo.
- Suggested date and schedule of Congress, including draft program (only in the full proposal).
- Draft mobile workshop program.
- Draft pre/post Congress program.

3. Structure of Local Organising Committee

- CVs of Congress Chair, Co-chair(s), formal members.
- Evidence of prior conference organising experience.
- Availability / expected time commitment (in person-hours) prior to Congress.

4. Congress Budget and Management

- Line budget, including proposed registration charges and other sources of income (including “in kind” contributions).
- The budget should include fixed and variable cost components.
- A budget sensitivity analysis should be conducted to show the financial outcome based on the targeted number of attendees, 25% lower participation and 25% higher participation.
- Secretariat service resources / structure to be deployed.
- Insurance cover to be deployed.
- Proposed formal staffing and voluntary support (prior to and during Congress).
- Identity of commercial conference service provider(s) / professional conference organiser, including evidence of track record, stability, capacity (if to be used).
- Identity of professional abstract manager with a system to distribute to co-chairs for evaluation of paper/panel proposals, and which allows co-chairs to communicate. Furthermore, the system should allow coherent sessions to be composed or organised.
- Management timeline / critical path / key dates in preparation.
- Final statement of accounts must be submitted by the HI/LOC within one year of the Congress.

5. Infrastructure and Other Resources

- Venue capacity, features and costs, barrier-free access.
- Proposed catering provision, capacity to meet special dietary needs.
- Accommodation capacity, costs and locations in regards to venue(s).
- Intra-Congress transportation provision between venue, workshops, dinners, etc.
- Proximity of accommodation/venue to airports and other major transport infrastructure (in travel time and costs).
- Resources allocated for provision of Congress website, which can be accessed throughout the worldwide region.
- Internet and other promotion methods proposed to be used, to reach all the planning schools member of GPEAN
- On-line abstract submission and review.
- Registration and implementation of the congress can be carried out in a hybrid form (online and offline).
- Documentation of the Congress; proceedings of articles/abstracts, video recordings, photos as well as agreements and other congress results should be made available online on the congress website which should be managed for at least 5 years. Copy of documentation should be submitted to the WPSC committee.

6. Appeal of Host Location

- City and region appeal, and accommodation costs.
- Accessibility by national and international transport and costs.
- Compelling planning issues.
- Potential issues of perceived public safety / public hygiene / health provision / travel visas, etc. that may need to be addressed, including personnel who can handle crises such as robbery involving loss of travel documents and need of medical services.

APPENDIX IV – TYPICAL Wpsc CONGRESS ACTIVITIES

1. Keynotes

Keynote presenters are selected among distinguished scholars, practitioners and leaders of various national or international organisations who are expected to deliver an inspiring and thought-provoking speech related to the theme of the Congress. The keynotes are given during plenary sessions at the opening, closing or during the Congress. The number of keynotes and sessions vary from one to three, depending on the time allowed and the proposed Congress program.

Note that the opening plenary keynote is determined by the SC.

2. Roundtables

Roundtables offer a less structured format for discussing a topic of current interest, usually within 90 minutes sessions. The roundtables involve 4-5 panellists who (in 10-15 minutes) present their views, approaches and / or experiences in dealing with a particular planning issue, and a moderator who invites and facilitates Q&A and discussion. Roundtables are an important outlet for exploring the emerging and critical issues and innovations (theoretical, methodological) from multiple and diverse perspectives.

3. Full Paper Presentations

Full Papers are included in the regular sessions organised by tracks. The sessions are typically 90 minutes long and include 4-5 paper presentations and time for discussion / Q&A. Full papers present a developed research idea which is empirically tested with rigorous methodology and has specific findings. The full papers are generally equivalent to draft journal articles or book chapters. Depending on the author's decision, the papers may or may not be shared with other Congress participants in digital or hard copy format. A competition for the best paper could also be organised.

4. Poster Presentations

Posters are exhibited in a specially designated area on the Congress premises. The organisers may decide to create a special poster session and make additional announcements in order to ensure that the posters are viewed by the majority of the Congress participants. This session should be scheduled outside the time used for regular parallel sessions. A competition for the best poster could also be organised to raise the standard of and attention to the research presented in the posters.

5. Mobile Workshops

Mobile Workshops (MW) are designed to offer the Congress participants an educational experience through locally sourced examples of successful or failing places and projects. They may take a half day of the Congress and are usually offered in the afternoon of the second or third day of the Congress or can be full-day at the end. Depending on the expected attendance, 10-20 MWs are organised and made available during the registration on a first-come-first-serve option. Each MW has a guide (a professor, a PhD student or a local expert), responsible for preparing the materials and the logistics. MWs can be motorised or non-motorised (e.g., on foot or by bicycle). The transport mode and the length should be clearly stated in the programme and registration, as the choice of MW may be affected by individual mobility preferences or limitations. There may be additional fees for full-day post-conference MWs.

6. PhD Workshop

PhD Workshop is organised in conjunction with the Congress. It is intended to provide educational experience for pre-selected students in the early stages of their dissertation research, through thematic lectures and discussions and interactive working sessions. PhD Workshop is planned simultaneously with the main Congress, but managed by a different committee which develops the programme, proposes and invites the mentors, issues the announcements, and selects the participants. Guidelines for organising the PhD workshop are provided in a separate document. It is usually offered right before the Congress to provide PhD students opportunity to attend the Congress as well.

7. International Student Competition

The International Student Competition is organized in conjunction with the Congress. It can be one of the pre-congress activities. It allows planning students to present their project work before the Congress begins. The competition aims to encourage students to embrace global transformation and offer new planning ideas and innovations. The Congress committee should establish a committee to organize the competition and appoint jurors to select the competition winners.

8. GPEAN Meeting, Conferences and Associations Presentation

The meeting of the GPEAN Council and its series editorial board (Dialogues in Urban and Regional Planning) comprises two half-days, conducted before and after the congress. It requires a quiet room for about 10-15 people, equipped with a projector, internet access and a screen. It is also expected that the LOC provide room and equipment for the presentation/conference of GPEAN associations included in the scientific programme. This could be in the format of a roundtable or a plenary session. Other rooms might be requested on demand of GPEAN (e.g., AESOP annual congress assembly, meeting rooms for different journal editorial boards, etc.).

9. Publication Fair

Book and journal exhibitions are a chance for planning scholars to meet with authors and publishers. It is held in a location that is frequented and accessed by the attendees on hourly basis. The potential exhibitors are contacted by the Congress organisers.

10. Social Events

Social events are hosted in unique places of cultural and / or political importance. In some cases, these events are sponsored or co-sponsored by national governments (e.g., ministries for planning), local authorities, and / or other research and professional organisations and it could be one or a combination of the following: Welcome Reception; Congress Dinner or Closing Reception. The organiser must inform if the cost is included in the Congress registration fee or not.

11. Breaks

The following provisions are compulsory and included in the registration fee: box lunches (if necessary for mobile workshops); lunches, coffee and tea for the morning and afternoon breaks, giving special attention to special dietary requirements, e.g., vegetarians, diabetics, homeopathy followers, non-pork eaters, and halal meat eaters. The location of these provisions should be within the Congress facilities and in proximity to presentation rooms and exhibit areas.

12. Information/Communication

All Congress-related information, updates, announcements and news should be available on a website, including: dates and deadlines; membership of the Local Organising Committee (LOC) and any other committee; tracks descriptions and co-chairs; instructions, templates and links for online submission of papers and any other relevant material; congress fees; registration (online); accommodation (including a map with distances, travel modes and time of travel to the Congress venue); general schedule; keynotes; programme (sessions, roundtables, posters); PhD Workshop (schedule, programme, location, mentors, etc.); social programme and events; instructions for presenters (paper, panel, poster) and session chairs; mobile workshops (description, timing, special requirements, leaders); congress venue (maps and plans with clearly marked spaces); local transport (from-to airport and around the city); contacts; other relevant information (climate, history, local cultural or sport events held at the time of the Congress, etc.); gallery of photos and videos taken during the Congress (keynotes, general sessions, receptions and other social events, mobile workshops, dinner).

13. Number of Tracks

The tracks are designed to reflect the diversity of the planning field and to organise the programme into easily identifiable topics that the attendees can navigate and find the sessions and presentations of their interest. The number of tracks (about 15) and their titles are the responsibility of the SC considering LOC inputs. The responsibility of reviewing and selecting papers and creating the programme lies in the track co-chairs, in collaboration with the organisers. The three co-chairs should include one member from the local community of planning scholars (i.e., host institution, region or country) and two from the membership at large, defined together with the SC, ensuring a representative track leadership for the Congresses co-sponsored jointly with other associations, presenting a broader representation from the relevant parts of the world. The track co-chairs are expected to attend and register for the Congress and their tasks are to: a) write a track description to be posted on the Congress web site; b) review the submitted abstracts and decide which are acceptable based on the process agreed with the organiser and the other co-chairs, c) propose track sessions of 4-5 presentations, poster displays and panels based on the submitted abstracts, d) participate in the meetings of track co-chairs as organised by LOC before, during or at the end of the Congress. The list of tracks for WPSC 2022 is attached as indicative of track themes (Appendix VI).

Note that the number of tracks (about 15) and their titles are the responsibility of the SC considering LOC inputs.

14. Congress materials and accessories

Congress materials include: a) Book of abstracts with ISBN (printed and / or digital format / online); b) Book of proceedings with ISBN, in which the authors decide whether to publish or not (printed and / or digital format / online); c) Congress Programme (printed and digital format / online); d) Academic information (journal and book leaflets, meetings, etc.); e) Invitations and tickets (e.g. for congress dinner, mobile workshops, welcome reception, cruises); f) Local attractions, travel and entertainment information. It is up to the LOC to decide what accessories to provide, and, except for the badge, all are optional. Following are examples of accessories: a) Badge (should be clearly legible bearing the name of the person, institution and Congress, GPEAN and the Associations logos); b) Bag (should contain the Congress material); c) Notepad; d) Pencil or pen, etc.

15. Submission of Abstracts and Papers

All submission of abstracts and papers should be done online through the Congress web site. Submitted abstracts and papers should be accessible to the track co-chairs by special permissions to access the system. The co-chairs might see only the abstract that are relevant to their task. The system should facilitate recording of the co-chairs' decisions to accept or reject the abstract (each and then final agreed-upon decision), and possibly entertain other options (e.g., suggest for a poster session, suggest a more suitable track, etc.). Based on the final decisions recorded in the system, the corresponding authors are informed of the outcome by the Congress Organisers. The track co-chairs suggest the sessions' chairs among the registered or expected participants, contact them and confirm the assignment with the Organisers (for inclusion in the programme).

16. Registration

The system used for Congress registration should be integrated with other Congress activities as well as the financial processing and accounting, such as selection of Mobile or PhD Workshops. During an online registration, the prospective attendees should be able to fill in a form containing all necessary details and have several payment options, international and domestic (invoice, online by credit card or an account, bank cheque). On-site registration should be available during the Congress and should rely on the same system so that problems such as duplications or manual handling (and possible misplacement of information) are avoided. Cancellation is an important part of the registration procedures. A clear cancellation policy should be developed, made easily accessible, and honoured by the Organisers.

APPENDIX V – INFORMATION ON PREVIOUS WPSC

First WPSC 2001

Host Institution: Tongji University, Shanghai, China

Sponsor Association: ACSP, AESOP, APSA and ANZAPS

Theme: “Planning for Cities in the 21st Century: Opportunities and Challenges”

Rationale: The First WPSC aimed to cover a wide range of topics which would be faced by planning educators and the profession in a rapid urbanising world in the turn of the new millennium. The selection of Shanghai reflected the view shared by four regional associations that the influence of the World Congress would be greatest if it could be held in one of the fastest growing cities and regions, where both the opportunities and challenges were greatest, and thus the need for planning was most obvious too.

Second WPSC 2006

Host Institution: Autonomous University of Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico

Sponsor Association: ALEUP

Theme: “Diversity and Multiplicity: A New Agenda for the World Planning Community”

Rationale: The Second WPSC was worried about how planning should address differences of culture and places taking into consideration the global forces that affect territories, how spatial justice could be defined in the light of diversity, and how to convert diversity and multiplicity into effective resources for the betterment of urban life.

Third WPSC 2011

Host Institution: University of Western Australia, Perth, Australia

Sponsor Association: ANZAPS

Theme: “Planning’s future – Future’s planning: Planning in an Era of Global (Un)Certainty and Transformation”

Rationale: The 2011 Congress aimed to cope with a series of “mega-wicked problems” in the form of rapid urbanisation, climate change, population growth and demographic structuring, natural disasters and, global economic, considering the (re)turn to urban and regional planning/planners for explanations and (re)solutions as a result of it. It aimed to critically reflect on where planning education and practice came from, where they were at that time and heading to over the following 10-20 years.

Fourth WPSC 2016

Host Institution: Federal University of Rio de Janeiro, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

Theme: “Global Crisis, Planning & Challenges to Spatial Justice in the North and in the South”

Rationale: The 2016 Congress aimed to discuss the challenges for planning to promote social justice considering the impacts of the 2008 financial crisis both in Global North and South, which various cities have witnessed the growing of protest movements of a discontent civil society.

Fifth WPSA 2022

Host Institution: Indonesian Planning Schools Association

Theme: “Planning A Global Village: Inclusion, Innovation, and Disruption”

Rationale: The joint 5th WPSA congress and 16th APSA congress in 2022, used these ideas as backdrop for critically examining the effect of disruptive innovation and inclusion in planning and design. At the same time, the congress also considered topics related to globalization and the way it stimulates creative disruption and inclusion in planning and design. We encouraged ideas that consider disruptive innovation and inclusion as other forms of machine capable to co-opt various actors and institutions in disseminating certain social, economic and cultural values, planning and design as a form of resistance against the commodification process diffused across space and social groups and is systematically embedded in the structural power relations of innovation politics, and historical assessment of space and built environment as a form of disruptive innovation.
