

The Cardiff School of City and Regional Planning (CPLAN) is one of the world's leading centres for teaching and research in the urban, regional, rural, and geographical social sciences. We are a multi-disciplinary school that for over half a century has been the premier University department in the UK for spatial planning research and professionally accredited education. We have an exciting and forward looking agenda for both our research and teaching and as such, are looking to make a significant new investment in recruiting scholars who can contribute to, and enhance our portfolio of activities. We are looking to appoint the following:

Chair in Economic Geography

Lecturer or professional tutor in urban design

Four research associates

Up to five fully funded PhD studentships (3 years)

CPLAN is looking to recruit a new Professor of Economic Geography to expand and enhance its portfolio of urban and regional economics research. The appointee will work with colleagues in the Centre for Advanced Studies (CASS) and Cardiff University's new high profile, multi-disciplinary Sustainable Places Research Institute (PLACE).

These new opportunities are designed to complement and build upon other recent investments and to ensure that we continue to provide a vibrant and dynamic environment for world-class teaching and research.
