

New Series / Call for Proposals

Cities and Nature

Series Editors:

Daniel Czamanski, Israel Institute of Technology (Coordinating Editor)

Itzhak Benenson, Tel Aviv University, Israel

Henk Folmer, University of Groningen, The Netherlands

Elena Irwin, The Ohio State University, USA

This new book series will address the perplexing interfaces among the spatial dynamics of urban built areas, small scale peri-urban agriculture and nature. The books will emphasize empirically based, cutting-edge, theoretical advances in economics, regional science, geography and ecology. In particular, the books will address, but not be limited to, the following topics: dynamics of the interface areas between urban, agriculture and natural land-uses; urban sprawl and suburban dynamics, peri-urban dynamics; urban ecology, dynamics of urban open spaces, ecological corridors; dynamics of agricultural landscapes; regional dynamics and development of the settlement network; landscape fragmentation. The books will include monographs and edited volumes of chapters written by foremost experts in the respective fields.

Call for Proposals

If you would like to contribute to this series, please contact Daniel Czamanski, Israel Institute of Technology, at danny@czamanski.com

Barbara Fess, Editorial Economics Springer, at barbara.fess@springer.com

For an overview of our complete program in Economics visit springer.com